

Downsizer

Time to move or downsize?

To help boost the retirement savings of older Australians the federal government has introduced a new measure giving them the opportunity to release built-up equity through selling their home.

What is the downsizing contribution?

The changes allow you to contribute up to $300,000 from the proceeds of the sale of your main residence to your superannuation. For couples, they can contribute a combined total of $600,000 for the sale of the same home ($300,000 each).

Who is eligible?

People aged 55 and over, working or retired, and have not previously made a downsizer contribution to their super from another home.

You or your spouse must have owned the home for at least 10 years prior to the sale of the house.

What type of home is excluded?

Caravan, houseboat or mobile home.

What is the timeframe for contributing?

The contribution must be made within 90 days of receiving the proceeds of sale (usually the settlement date).

What about contribution caps?

Downsizing contributions are not a non-concessional contribution and will not count towards contributions caps.

Downsizing contributions will not affect total super balances until they are re-calculated at the end of the financial year. The downsizing contribution, however, will count towards the transfer balance cap when super is moved into a retirement phase super account. To avoid going over the cap any excess can stay in an Accumulation account. You will be able to view your personal transfer balance cap in ATO online.

What about the Age Pension?

If you are considering downsizing please seek financial advice before acting, because selling your primary place of residence, which is exempt from the Age Pension assets test, might change how much you are eligible to receive.
